A Mournful Tragedy. "Ah me! how weak a thing The heart of woman is!"

Some years ago the fashionable world of Botham was startled from its proprieties at the ancouncement, in gossiping circles, and shortly afterwards in the sensational papers, that Min-nie Boker, the youthful daughter of Mr. Boker, a millionaire, had, in an evil hour, become enamored of her father's coachman, and consented to a secret marriage. The foolish attachment became known to the father when too late to remedy, and he subsequently disowned the foolish and erring child. Having carried off, with her father's consent, all her lewelry and personal effects, she was enabled to set her husband up in business-in a restauragt, we believe. Love in a cottage went on smoothly until Mr. Boker died, and it was found that he had not forgiven his daughter, and, as a consequence, had not willed one cent of his immense possessions to her. Mr. Dean, the "coachman husband," had a change come o'er the spirit of his dreams. In the marriage he evidently had an eye to the main chancethe money-bags of his father-in-law; and these tailing in their fruition, his love for "Minnie" waned, chilled, till coldness begat neglect; neglect brought forth weeping appeals from the youthful victim; weeping appeals from the victim of a romantic attachment begat dim past. A subsequent act in the domestic tragedy has just transpired in this goodly city, which we will briefly relate:

A gentleman of our city, who spends considerable time in alleviating the suffering and interested therein may require. want in the lower strata of human society, was, some weeks ago, called upon to help a woman in the lowest depths of privation, and in a personal interview with her, although the being before him was dressed in the scanty, ragged, and coarse garb of squalid poverty, and although her breath reeked with the fumes of villainous liquor, yet there was that in her virtuous life. An examination revealed the sad fact that the degraded and poverty-stricken being before that, abused, beaten, and starved by her husband, she was compelled to leave him, and, friend had a shawl belonging to her, and she was going to recover it, and under this plea went out from the home. She was known to have fifty cents with her, given her by a female

Since then she has not been seen by any one friend, to make some purchase for her.

dest events in domestic life, but sorrowful thoughts suggest themselves which are not to a fate which he must have foreseen.

We most sincerely trust, for the sake of human nature, that the consciences of the brothers, who inherited the immense wealth of Mr. Boker-thus increased by the worse than death of a sister-are daily and nightly agitated, and that they will continue so till they seek out and provide for and save (for who will doubt that she can be saved?) an only sister.

A Leap for Life. [From the Racine (Wis.) Journal] Last Friday afternoon Charles Hoyt, an engineer on the Western Union Road, and a friend of his by the name of John Olin, met with an adventure which nearly cost them their lives. They were looking at the break in the bridge over Turtle Creek, which had been caused by the freshet. While standing there the workmen undertook to move a pile driver. Last Friday afternoon Charles Hoyt, an enthe workmen undertook to move a pile driver. Charley and his triend went to assist them, but while moving the machine it tipped over, and the tower, or upright part, was coming direct-by where Hoyt and Olin were standing. To feb 16 HENRY COOK. ly where Hoyt and Ohn were standing. To crushed. There was only one chance for life! TEW GOODS. and that was to jump into the water twentyave feet below. How slight that chance seemed, as one looked upon that seething, boiling mass of water, filled with great cakes of floating ice, that as they swept by were crushed and jammed together! Still it was the only hance. Hoyt was the first to leap; Olin delived until nearly too late. As he sprang into the air, he was struck upon the head by the edge of one of the beams, which inflicted a tearful gash. The dark waters closed upon them, and when they rose they were far down HEAP STOCKINGS AND GLOVES. the stream, which swept them along with a force irresistible. Yielding to the current, they endeavored to reach the land farther down the stream. Now it seemed as though they were gaining, when they would be swept back again into the centre of the stream, or struck by the floating ice, they would be driven under the water. Thus for reach helf an hour did the water. Thus for reach helf an hour did the water. Thus for reach helf an hour did the water. Thus for reach helf an hour did the water. the water.
